BUILT IN 2018, THE WINDY 46 CHINOOK ‘IMPULSE’ IS A THREE-CABIN DEEP-VEE SPORTS CRUISER ON TWIN IPS PODS, MADE TO CROSS OPEN WATER AND STAY OUT ALL SUMMER.

ImPulse runs twin Volvo Penta D6-435 diesels on IPS 600 pod drives: 870 hp combined, through forward-facing propellers that pull clean water rather than push through it. The deep-vee hull cruises at around 30 knots and runs close to 38 flat out, and with 275 hours on the engines there is a great deal of use still ahead of them.

Life on board centres around the spacious teak-laid cockpit, sheltered by an electrically operated opening roof. Four helm seats provide excellent forward-facing comfort, while the aft seating area features an adjustable table, ideal for entertaining and socialising. Generous sunpads offer the perfect place to relax in the sunshine, while the teak-laid high/low bathing platform provides easy access to the water.

Volvo Penta’s joystick puts both IPS pods and the bow thruster under one hand. She moves sideways, turns on her own length and stays composed in a crosswind, so berthing a 46-foot cruiser becomes a job for the skipper alone rather than the whole crew.

Three cabins sleep six. The forward master has an island double, deep storage and its own ensuite, and two guest cabins share the second heads. Panoramic hull windows light a saloon finished in pale wood. The galley carries a hob, combination oven and fridge, and diesel heating stretches the season at both ends.
